After solving the complex and brutal murder of a judge, Israeli police officer Atlas (Lior Ashkenazi) suffers a complete breakdown. Homeless, he lives on the streets of Tel Aviv, utterly alone, cut off from friends, family and society... When he hears about the suicide of the young man he helped put away for the judge's murder, Atlas is shaken to the core. He begins a feverish hunt for the real murderer, and quickly finds himself facing the harshest of dilemmas: is the truth worth the price of its revelation? Can the pursuit of justice make amends for the crimes of the past?

Mama's Angel is a journey into the underbelly of life in a wealthy and complacent Tel Aviv suburb suddenly devastated by the brutal murder of a young boy. After the initial deep shock, the involvement of the local inhabitants in the case - direct or indirect - slowly begins to reveal itself, and previously unsuspected traumas and prejudices are laid bare. "Do you ever really know your own child?" is the question each neighborhood mother will ask herself during the long and tangled police investigation that ensues.

After Janne suddenly disappears while taking out the trash, the police tells Heta there's nothing they can do - a person has every right to go missing if there is no sign of a crime. Troubled, she begins searching for and finds only one clue: it seems Janne had undergone Koistinen's radical divorce therapy for men.

Heta is incredulous - everything was so good between them. In pursuit of the truth she joins four desperate divorced men in one of Koistinen's therapy groups... Together, they begin a strange journey towards their new lives. The Happy Hour of the Wolf is a compelling and unsettling exploration of male and female perceptions of separation.
